MEMORÆ SACRVM
VARDI DIXON Armigeri

Ad Lectorem.

Non Meritis ut amplius Merulonis,
Nec de Estuorum ut Iulianus Vixeretibus
Strepit illudicris hinc reperta Sedibus
Se parat Mortalis Quis—Nihilipius

Licet dabilem abestis Virtus, omnium
Et veroficem Honore hinc publicam
Mox ipse quocumque postulat contraxit
Hinc nuntiare sibi in comeditur

Errata postum Veni quocumque explicat.
Manes volent hinc obrii Silentia
Infigere Et quod dissipet Caliginem
Libere Hoc loquere, Lendit abstinent

Reader.

Stand not here to compliment the Dead
To make the Living both. The Family
Which has interest within this narrow Wall
Should haue Themselves to be some, than No

To All the Friends Virtues left should give
In Acts of Goodness meet our Applause
The Customs Self commends the contrary
Is not permitted to say more than This

Whence Blessings their Lives dilute
They beg in Charities may be contrall
And if hinc Virtues thine through Envy Well Thou imitate & spare thy generous Will

This Church is indebted, for its Ornaments of Pews & Pavement to the Bounty of
GEORGE HOOPER Esq^r.
Who bequeath'd this Memorial of his Regard, for the Place of his Nativity, and the Residence of his Ancestors:
which so justly bespeaks,
The friendly Remembrance of all those;
who in this Place frequent.
The Service of God.
He died March 6th 1759 Aged 33.
The Extent of his Liberality, enabled his Trustees.
To do this Justice to his Memory:
which his own Modesty, would not permit Him to direct.

Others, whose Manners unadorn'd by Art,
Ennobled e'ery Virtue of the Heart,
Fond to forbid in each sad Scene of Woe,
The Pang to torture, and the Tear to flow,
Take from the Muse, thou lov'd, this honest line
Sacred to Goodness, and a Soul like thine.
A Soul supreme that midst fair Ease and Health,
The Warmths of Nature, and the Pomps of Wealth,
Careless of all that wild Ambition fires,
All Art's wishes, and all Pride admires,
Cave Year on Year beneath her genial Ray
To toil in modest Innocence away,
And made with Passion, spite of all its Rage
Calm as her Sun-set in unclouded Age.
